

The Big Title

This is body text at eleven points, used to establish the body font size for the character-weighted histogram. It repeats a few times so the body size has more weight than the headings that follow it in the document.

A second body paragraph, still at eleven points, still filling out the character count so the histogram mode lands on the body size rather than being skewed by the much shorter heading lines above.

A Second Level Heading

More body text after the second-level heading, again at eleven points, to keep reinforcing which size is actually the body text of this document.